For reference only

In the livestock world, we list animals in our catalogs or promotion pieces that made significant contributions to the improvement of their respective species as “For Reference Only.” These animals have left their mark in their respective herd book and within a breeder’s herd or maybe several herds.

At the Mower County Fairgrounds in Austin, Minnesota, during the 69th National Barrow Show,” Dan Baker will take the block in Crane Pavilion as the national Yorkshire auctioneer for the last time. Dan has served in this position since the fall of 1975.

Talk about one that gathers the title For Reference Only. You know, something unique about most of the animals we place in the For Reference Only group is, the majority of the time, they were not the most flashy, maybe they didn’t win the show or were not the all-time record sellers. They were the ones that contributed in a quiet manner—almost behind the scenes. But, when you start looking back at their lifetime of service and how many different areas they contributed to, you appreciate them even more.

Dan’s journey started in April 1964 as a fieldman for the Spot Association. Wilbur Plager, the Secretary/Treasurer of the American Yorkshire Club (AYC), saw the good this one offered and tried to hire Dan to work for the AYC, but Dan turned him down. Later, Bessie Plager was visiting with Dan, and Dan told her he sure wished he would have taken the offer from Wilbur. Bessie was off and returned with Wilbur, and Dan came on board in December 1966.

Wilbur wrote the following in the January 1967 issue of the Yorkshire Journal, “Dan is 23 years old but has had a lot of practical experience for his age. He has done some auctioneer work so has had a great deal of sale experience, which will be of a great help. Dan began his duties the middle of December. Yorkshire breeders attending the Type Conference will get a chance to meet your newest member of the Yorkshire Club organization. He will be in the middle of a lot of work which will help take a big load off your secretary.”

At this Type Conference, Dan also gathered up the title for his editorial, “Stumbling along with Dan,” as he took a nose dive at the banquet and again later in the sale ring. This editorial ran in the Yorkshire Journal until Jan. 1, 1976, when Dan left the AYC to pursue a career as auctioneer for the many production sales held by breeders throughout the country. Dan remained a full-time auctioneer until September 1995, when he became the Advertising Coordinator of the Seedstock EDGE, until April 2003.

Dan and I have traveled many miles together and spent many nights as roommates. Even the 1,000 mile trip to Duncan every fall never seemed very long with the two of us discussing every subject in the purebred hog world and a few others. The one thing I always noticed about Dan was his selfless pursuit to uphold the purebred swine community, and whether he was selling a record-selling boar or a $1,000 boar, he was the ultimate professional. Thank you, my friend, for all your contributions and your friendship over the years. It is much appreciated.

So, in my For Reference Only issue, Dan E. Baker stands tall.

With school staring back up, it got me thinking about how I used to feel at this time of the year. I remember the first day of school was like pulling teeth for my mom to get me out of bed. I’m already not a morning person, but add school into the mix, and I really didn’t want to get up. I actually remember having nightmares about being alone with no friends the week leading up to high school. My mom reassured me this wouldn’t be the case. Ultimately, she was right, but I hadn’t seen my school friends all summer, so I had my reasons for being concerned. Once school started, I knew things were going to be alright, but school friends weren’t the same as livestock friends. My group of show friends used to dream up this livestock showing high school where we would all go so we didn’t have to go so long without seeing each other. I had forgotten about this idea until I started writing about it. Even now, it still seems great. However, I soon learned if you can make it through high school, college is the school we’d all dreamed up. A place for all livestock friends to get to hang out with each other, and when summer comes around, you still get to see them at livestock shows.

When I went to college, it was really important to me to branch out and make friends that had different lifestyles than me. I lived in cooperative housing at Purdue University where I lived with around 80 different girls throughout my college career, with very few of them being from a livestock background. What I quickly learned was my new friends had different ways of maintaining friendships. They could move on with their lives and move out of mine because they never had to work to keep a friendship afloat. Keeping in touch with people who were physically far away was a lot more difficult when they didn’t grow up with the same friendship game plan I did.

Maintaining personal friendships over long distances is something that has been part of my life since I can remember. Showing livestock my whole life taught me that friendship, like showing, takes hard work and effort to maintain. In college, I was less nervous about losing friends before I got back on campus, because although we weren’t necessarily on the same page, those non-livestock friends really enjoyed learning about livestock and going to shows. So not only were we friends, but I was also giving them insight to a world they had never seen before. This is important because some of my best friends

I was an NSR employee nearly five months before it happened. Perched casually on the edge of a chair in a hotel in Duncan, Oklahoma, Col. Dan Baker said, “You need to go to that Mexican restaurant down the street. They have the best Mostacholi.”

Perplexed, I made the mistake of asking why a Mexican restaurant would specialize in Mostacholi. Dan launched into an elaborate story. If I recall correctly, it included a love-struck man from Mexico and his Italian bride. He couldn’t make it through the whole explanation before the rest of the room erupted in a chorus of laughter.

I, Katie Maupin, had just fallen for my first “Baker-ism.” I considered myself lucky to have made it five months. Many have fallen much sooner to Baker’s cunning wit and uncanny way of spinning a narrative. Not only can this man tell a great story, but Dan has a God-given gift of being able to do so without cracking a smile. No one can tell a tale quite like Dan—whether it’s true or not is of little coincidence.

Dan is famous for his “Baker-isms.” They make him who he is. Here are some of my favorite “Baker-isms.” I hope you have had or will have the pleasure of learning as much from this great man as I have.

Poor Don Frailey legendarily fell for this one. Only Dan could find a “Baker-ism” in such a somber affair, but the man has a gift for making people laugh. He was even able to convince Garry Childs’ father, Max, who happened to be a Southern Baptist Preacher, to join in on the fun. Garry fell victim to many of their antics.

Although Dan may be one of the few people who can convince a preacher to prank people, he is also one of the most genuine men I’ve seen when it comes to his faith. Dan lives each day as an example to those around him.

Recently in a Facebook conversation, he was referred to as the “Patron Saint of Livestock,” and I’d say if God has any sense of humor at all He should at least consider the title.

“Now, I can finally take Sandy to the Golden Corral.”

One of the most quoted Col. Baker moments from the block, Dan said this right after setting record after record in last year’s legendary $1 million Yorkshire sale. While we may chuckle, like all “Baker-isms,” there is a shred of truth in this one as well.

Dan is the type of man who puts everyone before himself. In my time here with the NSR, he has been an example of selflessness and humility. Regardless of which breeder is in the ring, or who would ‘bother’ him with questions while he was announcing, Dan gave that person his full, undivided attention.

It doesn’t matter if an entry would contribute $100 or $100,000, he gave each one their due time and did his very best to get their full worth out of them. Come to think of it, Dan does the same thing with people. Those who work with and around him follow his lead and try to do their very best for their company, their operation or their team. Dan Baker knows the worth of good people and good livestock, and it’s often far more than we’ve ever imagined.

“And, for you Mrs. Baker?”

While Dan didn’t actually say this, he nor Lisa Kennedy have been able to forget the time they were mistaken for husband and wife in an airport. That could be because their co-workers over the years haven’t let either of them live it down.

While awkward, I’m not surprised it happened, because Dan treats each and every one of us, here at the NSR, like family. Like the saying goes, ‘You can pick your friends but you can’t pick your family,’ or in this case co-workers. Even if I had the choice, I would want Dan to be a part of the NSR crew. We know we can count on him to be here if we need something, whether that be a ride, some advice or just a set of ears to listen. I can’t begin to tell you how grateful I am to have been able to be influenced by the one and only Col. Dan Baker.

Although we’ve all fallen victim to his jokes, many of his “Baker-isms” have taught me important things about life such as, remaining true to yourself and your faith, treat everyone fairly and the people you work with are just a crazy, extended family.

Mr. Baker, your legacy in this industry is unparalleled, and maybe in my time here, one day I will be able to spin half as good of a story as you did.

MANAGING THE BREEDING HERD

Management of the breeding and gestating herd in any showpig operation lays the groundwork for each management group that follows. Although there are many challenges, understanding the principles of proper management and a lot of hard work can build a solid foundation for years to come. Therefore, we should not take the decisions we make in managing the breeding and gestating herd lightly.

Most of us can Google a list of things we need to do to be successful getting sows bred and having litters of pigs. The sometimes difficult thing to do is follow the recommendations and decipher what is important for a particular herd. I will try to explain why some things are important and maybe why some steps we take may not work out as well as we intend. It is important to work with your veterinarian to help tailor a program specific to your needs.

Pre-Breeding

Vaccinations

A vaccine containing Parvovirus, Leptospirosis and Erysipelas (PLE) should be given. Gilts should be given two doses of the vaccine, one at five weeks and a booster three weeks pre-breeding. Those times are ideal; however, we feel comfortable in giving those closer to breeding time, if the situation arises where there is not enough time. I suggest giving the first dose as close to five weeks as possible and the second dose two weeks later, even if that means the second dose is given within a few days of breeding. We can find all those bugs in nearly every operation, and the vaccine does a good job at controlling the abortions, mummies, stillborns and general infertility those diseases can cause in your herd. The one thing to remember is that a gilt’s maternal immunity can last up to 6 months of age and prevent the vaccine from creating an immune response. Six months is around the same time we are giving the PLE vaccine. Two doses are important for this reason, as the second dose should come with a lower level of maternal interference.

While a PLE is the only vaccine that should be given in every situation, there are other vaccines that may be significant. Work with your veterinarian to determine if a PRRS, Mycoplasma, Circovirus and/or Influenza vaccine may be beneficial to your pre-breeding program.

Another note on vaccination is that a vaccine is more likely to work and create antibody production/protection when given to an animal that is not under stress. Try to avoid giving a vaccine at the same time you mix a group of former show gilts or mix a group of sows coming out of the crate. Sows may respond better to the vaccine if given a day or two prior to weaning and mixing with other sows. Gilts may respond better if the vaccine is given prior to mixing or after mixing, depending on your time frame of when the gilts will be bred following getting mixed. Vaccines are never 100 percent, but if we make sure to give them at ideal times while an animal is under

Industry News

Valerie Duttlinger represents swine industry at Indiana State Fair

The Indiana State Fair showcases the past, present and future of Hoosier agriculture. The 2015 Indiana State Fair Year of the Farmer was presented by Dow AgroSciences and proudly dedicated the Indiana State Fair to the farmers who make it happen. To honor and celebrate those who have committed their lives to innovation in agriculture, each day of the 17-day fair highlighted various farmers or farm families who represent a different element of Indiana agriculture. These farmers, selected in collaboration with Indiana agriculture stakeholders, were featured on daily highlight sheets for the fair and participated in various events and exhibits all around the fair.

“Farmers are the heroes of modern agriculture, and the people on this list are amazing role models for this essential industry,” Rajan Gajaria, Vice President, North and South America, Dow AgroSciences, says. “There is amazing variety in Indiana agriculture, which gives fairgoers a unique opportunity to learn more about the farmers who feed us all.”

Valerie Duttlinger represented Indiana’s swine industry, Aug. 7, during the fair. She and her family reside in Gentryville, Indiana. They manage the operations at Bill Temple Farms.

Pig Paul honored by American Agricultural Editors’ Association

At the 2015 Agricultural Media Summit, Scottsdale, Arizona, Rolland “Pig” Paul was awarded the Distinguished Service Award. He is a pork producer leader who was at the vanguard of the commodity organization movement of the 1950s and ’60s. “Pig” saw the potential for hog farmers to take more control of their destiny – by improving the hogs they were raising and promoting their product. As field secretary of the Iowa Swine Producers, he threw himself into helping Iowa’s pork producers organize in county associations. In 1966, he was part of the group of 90 forward-thinking pork producers who gathered to organize $40,000 into a “get-ready” fund to canvas U.S. pork producers about priorities for industry programs and to generate the funds needed to get the job done. Guided by this poll, and using the “get-ready” funds, Paul was hired as the first executive secretary of National Pork Producers Council. From those meager beginnings, he organized the National Pork Producers Council and the Pork Checkoff.

September 2015
FDA calls for new antibiotic regulations

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration announced the Veterinary Feed Directive (VFD) final rule, an important piece of the agency’s overall strategy to promote the judicious use of antimicrobials in food-producing animals, to be implemented Jan. 1, 2017. This strategy will bring the use of these drugs under veterinary supervision so they are used only when necessary for assuring animal health. The VFD final rule outlines the process for authorizing use of VFD drugs (animal drugs intended for use in or on animal feed that require the supervision of a licensed veterinarian) and provides veterinarians in all states with a framework for authorizing the use of medically important antimicrobials in feed when needed for specific animal health purposes.

According to the National Pork Board (NPB)’s stance on antibiotic use, using antibiotics responsibly in animals and humans is essential to protect the health and well-being of both. In order for the NPB to express their values on this issue, they will advocate for objective, scientifically rigorous studies and risk assessments to make informed decisions; support veterinarian oversight and best practices; promote stakeholder education; demonstrate compliance with all regulatory requirements as in PQA Plus®; and encourage transparency and provide assurances regarding farmers’ commitment to raising healthy animals to help ensure a safe food supply.

The VFD final rule continues to require veterinarians to issue all VFDs within the context of a veterinarian-client-patient relationship (VCPR) and specifies the key elements that define a VCPR. These key elements include that the veterinarian engage the client (i.e., animal producer or caretaker) to assume responsibility for making clinical judgments about patient (i.e., animal) health, have sufficient knowledge of the animal by conducting examinations and/or visits to the facility where the animal is managed, and provide for any necessary follow-up evaluation or care.

On Dan Baker’s first chance to make an impression as a 20-year-old Spotted swine fieldman, he fell flat on his face turning in a bid at the National Barrow Show (NBS®). In typical Baker fashion, he picked himself up, joked about the manure covering his only suit and turned in the bid.

Eleven years later, in 1975, he stepped into the same sale ring in Austin, Minnesota, to once again make an impression, this time as the auctioneer. American Yorkshire Club (AYC) Executive Secretary Glenn Conatser had given him the opportunity to sell the Yorkshire hogs at NBS®, and it ended up being a record Yorkshire sale. This launched Baker’s 40-year run of selling hogs at NBS® and full-time career as a purebred swine auctioneer.
Dan Baker became fascinated with the auctioneering business at the age of 10. That led to a lifetime of auctioneering purebred livestock sales (below). As he retires from selling NSR sales, he will continue auctioneering at Christy’s of Indiana (left) and doing the purebred and state fair sales he currently sells.

Baker developed a fascination with auctions at the age of 10, when he went to his first farm auction with a neighbor looking for a tractor. "I can't say at that moment I wanted to be an auctioneer, but there was just something that really fascinated me about the whole process," he says.

Baker had so much fun at the first sale, he continued to ride along to any sale his neighbor went to, including a Duroc hog sale in Upper Sandusky, Ohio. Watching Paul Parrish, the Duroc fieldman, turn in bids made such an impression on Baker, he can still smell the mineral oil they used on the hogs to this day.

His first chance to work the sale ring came as an FFA member working the lunch stand at the Berkshire Five Star Futurity sale in Bucyrus, Ohio. Baker had already been requesting information from auction schools, and he knew the auctioneer at the sale was a Reppert School of Auctioneering instructor. Baker struck up a conversation with the auctioneer, and when the sale started, he had Baker work the ring. Baker took one bid the entire sale.

In 1962, 18-year-old Baker attended Reppert School of Auctioneering and started working the ring at purebred livestock sales. Two years later, his auctioneering career was put on hold when Gerald Nevins chose Baker to be the youngest ever Spot fieldman. The National Spotted Swine Record Association was broke, and so was Baker. He had a 1959 Ford car, one wool suit, $300 debt from auctioneering school and a $1,500 salary, but he wanted to do the job so badly he accepted with little hesitation.

It was as a Spot fieldman that Baker met Bill Powell, a Hampshire fieldman who Baker gives credit to bringing him into the swine industry. Powell took Baker under his wing and shared what to do and what not to do as a breed representative, and Powell was the one who would connect Baker with the AYC.

Wilbur Plager, executive secretary of the AYC, had expressed to Powell he was looking for an assistant, and Powell knew just the man for the job. The first time Baker was offered the position was in April of 1966. He did accept Plager’s offer for assistant executive secretary, but the Spots came up with a little more money, and he decided to stay.

“I felt really loyal to them. Goodness, I would have never been in a position to be known by anybody, if it hadn’t been for Gerald Nevins hiring me and giving me that chance,” Baker says.

Baker knew he had made a mistake at the NBS”, that September, by not taking the Yorkshire job. That was the year Don Michael and Son sold a Yorkshire boar, later named 8 Grand, for $8,000. Baker spent the whole sale observing the crowd and breeders standing ringside.

“I was probably the only one that left Austin, that fall, with a bad taste in my mouth,” he says. “It wasn’t so much that the boar brought $8,000, I could just see the whole industry was exploding around the Yorkshire thing.”

At the first National Pork Producer’s Council meeting in November of that year, Baker got a second chance with Plager. He happened to sit by Plager’s wife, Bessie, who told him she wished he would have taken Plager’s offer, to which Baker replied he wished he had too. She shot out of the room and dragged Plager back with her.

“He smiled at me and said, ‘I figured you would be coming to your senses pretty soon,’" Baker says. “From the time I walked into the office to talk about the job and walked out with the keys to a new Pontiac was 30 minutes.”

Plager and Baker were great compliments to one another and a great team for the AYC members. Plager was outspoken, while Baker was more laid back. Baker told someone once that Plager was like a bull in a china cabinet, and he was sitting there trying to catch the plates before they hit the floor. Despite Plager’s unconventional ways, Baker really looked up to him.

“It’s been 43 years since I worked with Wilbur, but his influence is still with me today,” Baker says.

When Plager retired in 1972, Glenn Conatser headed up the AYC and kept Baker on as his assistant, until Baker decided to become a full-time auctioneer in 1975. Baker had been Dan Baker (far right) spent nine years with the American Yorkshire Club as assistant executive secretary. In that role, he served as fieldman, magazine editor and breed representative at type conferences and industry meetings. He also filled in as auctioneer when the need arose.

He can almost look at you and know if you’re going to bid again or you have interest in a particular item. That’s a quality not many auctioneers have.” — Jack Christy

Baker began his auctioneering career at just the right time, as far as the swine industry economy was concerned. Just the year before, in 1973, Baker was working the ring when a Yorkshire Type Conference sale passed $100,000 for the first time. Baker says, he was so awestruck he went back the next day to sit in the bleachers and relive the whole thing. He wondered if the industry could ever do that again, and then another major conference that summer broke another record.

“It was the beginning of an explosion taking place in the swine industry and agriculture as a whole. $100,000 was a pile of money, and some of the breeders were starting to have $100,000 sales. It was a really explosive time,” he says.

Baker didn’t pick up many sales other people were already selling, except the ones he helped Shaw and Goode sell. Instead, most of his sales were new breeders coming on board and having their own production sales. One of those new breeders was Chuck Olsen of Irene, South Dakota. When Olsen Yorkshires held their first production sale, there was no question who they wanted to have as the auctioneer.

“Dan was the only one we would consider to do those,” Olsen says. “There is no doubt he was the auctioneer of the Yorkshire breed, and every breeder wanted him.”

Baker’s way with people was the thing that put him in such high demand, in Olsen’s opinion. He always had the right words for the right time when he was in the auction block to make everyone at the sale feel comfortable. Olsen noticed how Baker could read the crowd, something Jack Christy, owner of Christy’s of Indiana, also noticed when Baker started auctioneering with him.

“He can really relate to people when he’s on the auction block,” Christy says. “He can almost look at you and know if you’re going to bid again or you have interest in a particular item. That’s a quality not many auctioneers have.”

Olsen says, he knew Baker would treat everyone fairly and do what he could to help both the buyer’s and the seller’s operation. Olsen admires the way Baker lives his life and the way he conducted his auctioneering business.

“Even though I wasn’t an auctioneer, I took things from the way he conducts his business to model things we could do in ours – people relationships, treating people right and fairly and always being there,” Olsen says.

Treating people right and fairly is a lesson Darrell Anderson says he learned from Baker, when he became the AYC executive secretary. “He was a great mentor to me from the standpoint of not trying to show favoritism to anybody, but treat small breeders and large breeders alike,” Anderson says.

Baker has always had the mentality everything coming before him in the sale ring has an owner, and he works hard to get every animal sold, regardless of its owner’s name.

“I love to auctioneer a sale where everybody can get a little bit out of it. It’s great to sell the record-selling boars, and don’t think for a minute I don’t thoroughly enjoy it, but also getting other hogs sold well on down the way is real important to me because I’ve been on the bottom end of some of those things,” Baker says.

Mike Paul, current CEO of the National Swine Registry (NSR) says, Baker is first and foremost concerned about other people, rather than himself. Paul and Baker have had many conversations over the years about the good people who have left the industry.

“A lot of the time, people forget when people left the industry because of pseudorabies in the late-’70s, the farm crisis in the early-’80s and 8 cent hogs in the ’90s, Dan lost part of his income too as the Yorkshire auctioneer. But, he was always worried about the other people, not himself,” Paul says.
“Dan always says the hogs come and go, but the people who make a difference in your life are always there.”

Baker will tell you he has had a lot of people make a difference in his life, but the biggest impact came from two young men Baker knows nothing about. One night, in 1982, after selling Yorkshires at Eddie Meers’ sale in Illinois, Baker decided to spend the night in St. Louis, where he was robbed at gunpoint and shot by two young men in the hotel.

For several months prior to that night, Baker had really been struggling with who he was. Until that time, his life had been relatively easy. He had gotten married, had two daughters, had jobs he liked, operated his own business, lived in the best house on the street, and then all of a sudden it came crashing down around him.

“As an auctioneer, I just came through three of the greatest years I had ever had and have ever had since. It was an unbelievable time from 1976 to 1980, but nobody realized we were just on the verge of collapse as an agricultural community. My marriage ended. All of a sudden I went from the best years to zero and had to start all over,” Baker says.

He had hit rock bottom and wasn’t sure which way was up. Then, that night in St. Louis, two young men intent on doing harm did the best thing anybody could have done for Baker.

“When I got home and saw my daughters’ toys, I just sat there and cried for about an hour, realizing I really did have everything I needed,” Baker says.

With that realization came a new, refined Dan Baker, one that understood if he didn’t have the biggest paycheck or the best of everything life was still very good for him. He was grateful for the support he received from his church and several breeders who kept him going through those rough times.

To Garry Childs, owner of Southern Advantage Sires, it would come as no surprise Baker received support from several purebred breeders. According to Childs, Baker was very well liked in the industry. Wherever he was, he would make it a point to get to know not just the dad or the farmer, but also the wife, kids and hired men.

Childs understands firsthand how Baker could get to know an entire family. Baker recalls he met Childs at the Winter Type Conference in Athens, Georgia, in 1967, when Childs was just 5- or 6-years-old, and his family was getting started in the hog business. Childs just says he’s known Baker his entire life.

“Dan Baker, outside of my daddy, his brother and my granddaddy, was the person I most admired, when I was a young kid. He had the best job I could imagine. I couldn’t think of a better way to make a living,” Childs says.

Little did Childs know, he would later spend 15 years in his dream job as a Yorkshire fieldman, a career he credits largely to Baker and Pickel. The two of them taught Childs how to be professional and what being a breed representative was all about. One of the things Childs misses most about his fieldman days is getting in a car with Baker and discussing life, something they did for more than 300,000 miles.

There are a few things Baker misses about the old days, too – things like CB radios, homemade trailers and production sales. In the golden years from 1976 to the early-’90s, Baker averaged 125 on-farm production sales each year. However, the dynamics of the industry shifted, and Baker knew those sales were coming to an end.

“There are always changes that go on, but it’s important not to get run over when they do. There was no need to sit there and wish production sales would come back – they weren’t,” he says.

So, in the mid-’90s, he came back to the NSR full time as the advertising coordinator for the newly-developed Seedstock EDGE.

“We needed someone that could relate to the breeders and get everybody up to speed,” Anderson recalls. “He had a historical perspective and knew the breeders from an auctioneer and friend standpoint. He was the right man for the job.”

Baker stayed with the NSR for seven more years, auctioneering on the side, until he decided it was time to retire and spend time with his wife, Sandy, and their family. Outside of the swine industry, the two things Baker is most passionate about in life are his family and church, and he hopes he has been a positive influence for both.

Baker hopes his positive influence has carried over to the swine industry as well. When Baker talks to someone, he has a way of making them feel like he is genuinely interested in who they are and what their story is. Anybody who meets Baker also quickly learns there is an ornery streak in him, which keeps everyone on their toes.

“Dan is a solid, good person – that’s full of tricks. You have to watch his every move,” Paul laughs.

Many have fallen victim to one “Baker-ism” or another. Pickel, Sam Howell, Don Frailey and Childs were on the receiving end of several jokes, but one of Baker’s favorite stories came from an interview he did for the Seedstock EDGE, in 1997. Cammie
“He’s seen the development and success in the Yorkshire breed and been involved in just about every history-making moment since the early-’60s. When you think about that, it’s pretty mind boggling.”

— Garry Childs

In 1975, Glenn Conatser gave Dan Baker his first chance to sell Yorkshires at the National Barrow Show®. That sale would set the stage for Baker’s full-time career as an auctioneer, a career in which he would make a name for himself as one of the most in-demand auctioneers in the business.

Johnson was the intern, that year, and she asked for Baker to tell her something not many people in the industry would know about him. Without a moment’s hesitation, Baker starts in by saying he’s Jewish. His last name used to be Bakerstein, but when his ancestors moved here from the old country they dropped it to Baker. He also had nine children, some of which were Jewish and some were not. Johnson was feverishly writing down everything he said, until she heard laughter coming from the next office. That’s when she realized she had fallen into a “Baker-ism” and thoroughly agreed with a member of his home church who said, “If Baker isn’t talking about Jesus, he’s lying.”

That sense of humor, in addition to his way with people and professionalism on the block has kept Baker going and allowed him to continue as a member of the industry, despite all the changes he has seen. As Childs points out, it is pretty hard to talk about the Yorkshire breed, and the swine industry as a whole, without mentioning Baker.

“Dan is an icon in the industry,” Childs says. “He’s seen the development and success in the Yorkshire breed and been involved in just about every history-making moment since the early-’60s. When you think about that, it’s pretty mind boggling.”

Baker isn’t proud of his staying power in the industry because of what he’s seen and done; he’s just glad he’s been able to do what he loves for so long.

“Part of why I feel good about this 50-some year run is I’ve been able to do what I really enjoy,” Baker says. “Even though I appreciate history, I’ve never chosen to live in it so I haven’t paid attention to how many years have come and gone. All of a sudden, I realized I’ve been around a while.”

Although Baker is retiring from auctioneering NSR sales, he isn’t retiring from auctioneering completely. He will continue selling the purebred and state fair sales he currently works. He will also spend every Wednesday at Christy’s of Indiana in Indianapolis auctioneering pots and pans, as he puts it. As he leaves the national sales auctioneering business, he has no regrets. Instead, he is very grateful for all of the opportunities he has been given and the chances people took on him.

“Nevins hired a 20-year-old kid. He could have done a lot of other things better than hire some kid. Then, Wilbur had the whole world he could have hired, but he hired me. Glenn Conatser had a lot of auctioneering choices, but he hired me. Darrell Anderson hired me, and I couldn’t even turn on a computer. All the breeders and associations that hired me to do their sales over the years could have chosen another auctioneer. They all could have hired someone else,” he says. “I’m so appreciative I had those opportunities, and I’m very grateful.”

Outside of auctioneering purebred livestock sales, the two things Dan Baker (left) are most passionate about are his family and his church. In his retirement, Baker will be able to spend more time with his wife, Sandy (right), travelling to visit their five children and nine grandchildren.

Leaving a Legacy is the first article in a three-part series of stories focusing on farm succession planning. Learn how to build your own legacy before following one family through the process of bringing home an off-farm heir and another that passes the torch to a young person involved in the industry.

By Katie Maupin
For years, you invested blood, sweat, tears and toil into your farm. You’ve mended fences, tilled the soil, selected the best genetics and worked countless hours to build something to be proud of, but what would happen if you were gone tomorrow? What would become of those strong fences, your land, your herd? Who would care for it? Who would pay for it? What will be your lasting legacy?

The very nature of farm succession and farm estate planning scares a lot of producers. No one wants to think about their farm going on without them, but the reality is it is a necessary step to keep working farms together during times of transition. Iowa State University Extension farm transition specialist David Baker likens a farm succession and estate plan to a road map, which steers producers and their families toward their goals.

“If you don’t write it down, you won’t have any direction or a road map to where you are going,” he says. “In a sense, it is a goal that says how you are going to get there.”

While South Dakota State University Extension livestock farm management field specialist Heather Gessner says, estate and succession plans lay out what will happen to assets in the future, she notes they often play an important role in bringing farm kids home and into the operation. According to a Farm Journal survey, 80 percent of respondents hoped to pass their farm onto the next generation, but the Small Business Administration reports less than a third of family businesses are successfully passed on. This could be because 71 percent of retiring farmers have not named a successor, according to an Iowa State study. With these stats, it’s easy to see why these plans are less about who receives the assets and more about how the legacy of a family’s farm can remain intact.

Farm estate planning attorney Kyle Mandeville’s first priority is always maintaining the operation through transition, and that always requires a plan – from the care of livestock to planning for expenses, such as outstanding bank notes and liabilities, to inheritance taxes. Attorney Mandeville’s Indiana law firm, Bennett Boehning & Clary LLP (BB&C), specializes in helping farm families plan for such transitions.

Where to start
Most farm succession and estate plans are created by attorneys who specialize in agricultural law and farm planning. Gessner suggests doing your research in order to find an attorney who does at least 75 percent of their business in that sector, so they know the ins and outs of the process.

“Put together a set of goals that say this is what I want to happen,” Gessner says. “If you can’t tell your attorney that, then they can’t always start with him. Mandeville notes sometimes families will contact Extension educators or agricultural economics professors to help facilitate conversations before entering an attorney’s office.

Baker is one such Extension educator. He specializes in facilitating conversations with farm families about the future of their operations.

“As a non-attorney, I don’t get involved in drafting documents,” Baker says. “I focus more on everyone having a similar goal and expressing them openly. I want to know what each generation is motivated by.”

Whether you feel it is the right choice to reach out to an attorney or an Extension educator to facilitate the first step in your farm succession and estate plan, you need to do a little homework.

A list of your assets and liabilities, including how each piece of land is titled and who holds the bank notes, are very important to the process. The senior generation should also have the goals they would like to accomplish with their plan and have prepared a list of survivors.
help you accomplish your goals. You don’t need to know how all of that is going to happen, but you have to be able to tell them what you want to happen so they can give you ideas.”

Being prepared before you seek legal counsel could also help your pocket book when it comes to planning expenses. For example, attorneys will need to know how each piece of land is titled, so they can estimate the cost of their services based upon how many land transfers they will need to make.

“Each title will have its own fee, so if you’re missing three or four of them, all of a sudden your bill becomes bigger, and you’re upset with the attorney because they told you the wrong price. But, they didn’t tell you the wrong price — you just didn’t give them the right information,” Gessner says.

Mandeville asks his clients for a summary of their goals, a balance sheet, a list of assets and the ownership of those assets, the basis on the property and equipment, and a list of any outstanding debt on assets, including who owns that debt.

“The current ownership of farm assets could determine the heir of a specific farm, without a comprehensive estate plan,” he explains.

Being prepared can help families avoid large problems in the future. One of these could be the required land transfers they will need to make. Often they evoke many emotions, since family members may each have a slightly different vision for the future.

Baker facilitates many of these conversations, and one of his first steps is establishing a set of ground rules for all parties involved.

“We don’t allow criticism of others,” he says. “We want everyone to get a chance to talk.” Sometimes Baker has to drag opinions out of quiet family members who own the land, Gessner says.

“Each title will have its own fee, so if you’re missing three or four of them, all of a sudden your bill becomes bigger, and you’re upset with the attorney because they told you the wrong price. But, they didn’t tell you the wrong price — you just didn’t give them the right information,” Gessner says.

“Many family members have a voice to share some of your ideas and opinions. You have to respect that as you go forward.”

The biggest tip Gessner has for preparing for a family succession conversation is to forget when you talk logistics.

Start your plan checklist

- LIST OF ASSETS (both farm-related and personal)
- LIST OF LIABILITIES (such as large land notes)
- LIST OF LAND & PROPERTIES OWNED (include how each piece of property is titled)
- GOALS FOR THE FUTURE (for example, keep the land together)
- LIST OF SURVIVORS (you would be surprised how easy it is to forget when you talk logistics) to see what their future plans are. This can be a difficult part of the process for some families, and sometimes there are even tears in one corner or another. Baker’s goal is always to keep the farm and its legacy intact.

“I’ve always said you can have all the profits in the world, but if you don’t have the right people you don’t have anything,” he says.

To Baker, bringing the right people to the table means all of the farm and family stakeholders. And yes, that even means in-laws.

“The biggest tip Gessner has for the senior generation is to simply go into the conversation with an idea of what they want to accomplish, so they can keep the communication going and the process driving forward.

“In the end, it’s mom and dad’s so they can do what they want,” she says. “They’re opening up the door for communication and letting you have a voice to share some of your ideas and opinions. You have to respect that as you go forward.”

The etiquette heirs may have learned in boardrooms away from their childhood home still apply during family conversations — maybe even more so.

The senior generation needs to solidify their own goals, Mandeville says, then incorporate the goals of the children.

“The goals of each generation might not match,” he says. “Family communication can drastically change the approach of the family and the direction where the farm is going — usually for the better.”

In the end, it’s about respect and knowing how to best communicate with each member of your family and the farming operation.

“It all comes down to personalities, knowing who you are dealing with and utilizing words and body language to make the conversation as harmless as possible,” Gessner says.

Bringing in the next generation

Bringing young people back to rural communities to take over the family farm is something Baker considers to be economic development in its purest form in the Midwest. He says, by encouraging young people to return to the farm and raise the next generation, we will strengthen the fabric that holds rural America together.

Finding ways to bring the next generation home is often a challenge that starts the farm succestion and estate planning process.

Sometimes, Gessner says, the next generation can return home with no set plans regarding housing or compensation.

“Those type of situations are where stress starts for everybody,” she says. “You’re not getting paid what you thought you were going to get paid, or you’re living in mom and dad’s basement and you didn’t think that was going to ever happen again.”

These major stressors can be avoided with proper planning. According to Baker, the senior generation must decide if they indeed have a legitimate business capable of supporting the parties involved and the desire to have someone succeed them in the operation. This means mentoring and passing on the knowledge and experience they’ve gained over the years. Likewise, when a young person comes to him and says they would like to farm, Baker asks them what type of skills and education they can bring into the operation. Most importantly, they need to be willing to learn and have a plan in place to contribute more resources to the business.

Mandeville will often use business entities, such as limited liability companies (LLC) and corporations to bring family members into the fold. These allow parents to hold and operate their farm land, buildings, equipment, etc., as part of a company that can then be passed onto their children in shares.

Gessner notes these business structures may have several advantages, such as limiting personal liability, if there was an on-farm accident, and creating set exit plans if the family farming agreement doesn’t work out as planned.

Getting any agreement down on paper is always a great idea. In Baker’s mind, it alleviates any confusion and makes these business arrangements transparent and easy to follow.

Fair isn’t always equal

One of the most challenging questions in farm succession and estate planning is how to handle off-farm heirs. Parents always want to be fair to their children, but when it comes to farm heirs versus off-farm heirs the question is often raised – does fair mean equal? In many cases it does not.

“I acknowledge right up-front that many of the assets we’re talking about are assets generated by the farm business, and many of these assets still play an important role in the farm business,” Baker says. “We need to focus on how to keep farm assets separate from personal assets, while compensating everyone for their contributions for the business. If a non-farming sibling has contributed to the business, how much is it worth?”

Legacies are often not about material objects, whether that be land or even money, according to Gessner. Lately, she has noticed a trend where the senior generation passes on their legacy to off-farm heirs in the forms of personal items and stories. Maybe, it’s a rocking chair with a written memoir about how that rocking chair has been in the family since it made the trip out west on a wagon.

“One of the best ways I’ve seen people work through the planning process is to have the conversation early and often. This ensures off-farm kids know what is happening with the land and business,” Gessner says. “Several of them are putting together life insurance policies so there is something in the future for their off-farm heirs, and they also make personal gifts while they’re still alive.”

Building a farm legacy isn’t focused on tomorrow as much as it is focused on life two decades from now.

“The goal is not always to be happy, but fair,” Mandeville says. “Fair doesn’t always mean equal, but parents always want what is best for their family.”

Making an estate plan can include some hard decisions and tough conversations, but as tough as it was to build your legacy, keeping it without a plan is even harder.

“Your state has an estate plan in place,” Gessner says. “Not having a plan in place will never accomplish your personal, family or operational goals.”
The Twenty three billion. Twenty three billion pounds of pork, that is, is produced in the United States each year, according to Dr. Eric England, Ohio State University assistant professor. The average American typically consumes 45-50 lbs. of pork each year, according to the USDA. The average global consumption gets a bit tricky to determine.
sit at about 45 lbs. per person,” England says. “But, what is unique about it is, the number is skewed because if we take China out, it goes to about 30 lbs. Because of such high pork consumption in China, the average pork consumption increases by 50 percent.”

During processing, each pork carcass is divided into five wholesale, primal cuts of meat. These cuts are able to feed the growing number of pork consumers, both domestically and internationally. They are the blade pork roast, picnic shoulder, loin, side and ham. England says, an average hog weighs 280 lbs., and Dr. Gretchen Mafi, Oklahoma State University, adds the carcass weighs around 210 lbs.

From the total carcass weight, the ham accounts for 21 percent; loin 18 percent; blade pork shoulder 7 percent; picnic shoulder 9 percent; the side 21 percent (belly 17 percent and spareribs 4 percent); jowl 3 percent; feet, tail, and neck bones 6 percent; fat back, clear plate and other fat trim 11 percent; and lean trim 4 percent, England says.

England also says, pork is a nutritional and wholesome protein food source. Dr. Markus Miller, Texas Tech University, and Mafi agree and have helped dive a little deeper into the retail and wholesale cuts of the pork carcass and what they offer a customer.

BLADE PORK ROAST
(BOSTON BUTT)

Retail cuts:
• Whole Blade Pork Roast
• Blade Steak
• Individual Muscles

The blade pork roast, also known as pork shoulder, is a wholesale and retail cut. Recently, it is beginning to gain quite a bit of popularity. Typically, the blade pork roast is sold whole and fresh. People take those home to make a very popular product we know as pulled pork, Miller says.

The blade pork roast is not the leanest cut of meat, but has the right percentage lean, because it is not too dry and not too fat, he says. Mafi says, the blade pork roast has a higher percent of seam fat than other cuts from the carcass. Miller adds its composition makes the blade pork roast the most desirable cut to produce pulled pork.

“We have seen a tremendous increase in price,” Miller says. “The Boston shoulder used to be a value cut. The price on those has gone up significantly in the past five years to where there was a time here for six months the Boston was more expensive than any other cut on the market.”

The blade pork roast is typically a bone-in cut, but some further processed products, like pulled pork, are boneless. Blade steaks are another common cut from the blade pork roast, Mafi says. While they are not seen very often at retail, Miller says, there are some individual muscles that can be marketed.

The preferred method to cook cuts from the blade pork roast is over low, moist heat for long periods of time. This method of cooking proves customers prefer low, moist heat over other methods with the popularity of pulled pork, Miller says.
The picnic shoulder is a cut Miller classifies as the “less expensive ham.” The picnic shoulder is the least expensive cut and is comparable in leanness to the blade pork roast. Contrary to most blade pork roasts, the picnic shoulder is generally cured, smoked and/or processed, like a ham, and not sold as a fresh cut of pork, Miller says. Occasionally, shoppers will see these cuts at retail, but it is not common. It can also be bone-in or boneless depending on the cut as well, England says.

“It would be utilized by the consumer as a ham, a cheaper version, that has more connective tissue and more muscle, but still has some of the best flavor components you can get in a pork product,” Miller says.

In this case, the picnic shoulder is often found as ground pork or sausage product, he says. England adds it is also a really good alternative to make pulled pork.

Miller points out the picnic shoulder is used for products outside of the meat case such as meat and snack sticks, lunch meats and pepperonis. The connective tissue from the picnic shoulder is a positive property when making these products.

When preparing the whole picnic roast, Mafi recommends, like the blade pork roast, low, moist heat for a long period of time. The arm steak is best prepared on the grill.

Two cuts of meat rise to the top pretty quickly when naming popular cuts from the side: bacon and spareribs. But, other cuts, such as baby back ribs, back ribs and riblets fall under the “boney cuts” with the spareribs, according to Miller. Bacon is the highest in demand and highest-priced retail cut.

“Bacon is king,” Mafi says. “I don’t know anyone who does not like bacon.”

This cut offers the highest fat content of any. Bacon also is a further-processed, value-added retail cut which drives the price of the least-lean cut of the carcass, she says.

“That tells you people value flavor and things like that more than we do diet, health, percent lean and fat,” Miller says.

As far as the price of the “boney cuts,” they are relatively expensive in terms of selling a lot of bone and not a lot of lean, Miller says. These cuts would be sold and utilized more by barbecue restaurants or grilled at home by consumers. Now, for bacon, consumers can prepare it many ways, and it is finding its way into many non-traditional dishes such as ice cream and pizza, Miller says.

There is more innovation going on with the side than some other cuts. Miller points out to not forget about the pork skin that comes off the belly to make chicharrón, as it has quite a bit of value. England and Mafi agree fresh side is gaining popularity in the restaurant sector.

“I think the side is unique because of being able to get the fresh side and how people are starting to use it and how it is being sold,” Mafi says. “It seems to be a cut a lot of chefs are starting to put on their menu as appetizers or different things.”

Mafi adds, since the side is being utilized in a lot of interesting ways it is even making appearances in places such as the FOOD Network.
The loin, longissimus dorsi (LD), is the longest muscle and serves as bone-in, semi-boneless and boneless retail cuts, Miller says. From a fresh meat cut perspective, the loin typically has the highest value, Mafi says. She adds it is the leanest cut of the carcass, and they are starting to see it show up in higher-end restaurants, especially with the premium branded Duroc and Berkshire pork pushing their marketing efforts to that demographic.

“The loin would have, by far, the most cuts you would see at retail,” Mafi says.

From the front of the loin to the center portion back into the sirloin, the whole loin is marketed in four to five different fashions, Miller says.

The tenderloin is a very high-priced, excellent cut a lot of consumers desire because it is always very tender and does not dry out as much, Miller says. The bone-in chops are usually sold as value packs and come from the sirloin end, and the boneless pork tenderloin also make an excellent roast, he adds.

With the abundance of different cuts, the loin avails itself to many different forms of cookery: grilling, pan frying, smoking and roasting to name a few methods. England says, the majority of the time though, the cuts from the loin use high-heat, quick-cooking methods.

LOIN

Retail cuts:
- Whole Loins
- Tenderloins
- Boneless Loin Chops
- Butterfly Chops
- Back Ribs
- Blade/Rib/Center Loin Chops
- Bone-in Loin Chops
- Bone-in Rib Chops
- Whole Loin Roast
- Sirloin Chops

The ham is a moderately-lean cut and is the largest wholesale cut in the pork carcass.

Ham has its unique place in the market because of its variation in usage. Some hams become very high priced because of the value-added processing associated with spiral hams and honey-baked hams for the holidays, Mafi says. Then, you have deli meat, which is not as expensive or as high of value; therefore, the ham offers large deviation in price and carcass value, Mafi says. The deli meat typically comes from the inside and outside ham, Miller adds.

Pork knuckles, or hocks, are another cut that is gaining increasing popularity in the retail sector, today, he says.

“A cut called the knuckle is kind of an underutilized portion of the ham,” Miller says. “Because, from a boneless ham manufacturing standpoint, sometimes its coloration properties are a little bit different. So, being able to sell that as a small roast or steak has been pretty popular here recently.”

If you are looking for a fresh ham, you might have a little bit of trouble, Mafi says. “You don’t see a lot of fresh ham or leg,” Mafi says. “The fresh hams become a whole different thing. You have to be a little more educated to cook those. Most people don’t really cook those anymore.”

Since the ham is a further-processed meat, cooking it is not typically necessary, but if desired one can prepare it in about any way they would like, she says.

HAM

Retail cuts:

Remove chops from marinade (do not pat dry), discarding marinade from the bag. Grill chops directly over heat, turning once, until internal temperature of pork on a thermometer reads between 145 degrees F (medium rare) and 160 degrees F (medium), followed by a 3-minute rest, about 8 to 11 minutes.

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
Kosher Salt
Pepper
Barbecue sauce, (optional)

Prepare fire for indirect-heat cooking in a covered grill. Rub ribs with vegetable oil and season both sides with salt and pepper. Place ribs, not overlapping, over indirect heat on grill. Close grill hood and cook ribs for 1 1/2 to 2 hours, until ribs are very tender.

Marketing & Communications Intern

Spending my summer with the Marketing & Communications team allowed me to continue my passion for communications and the livestock industry. Not only did I expand my knowledge of the livestock industry, I was also able to further develop my professional skills as an ag communicator. I was given the opportunity to improve my writing and design skills through various projects. In addition, I enhanced my photography and social media skills through show and sale coverage at shows. Most importantly, I learned how to tell the story of the purebred swine industry. This internship has allowed me to explore and create career opportunities as well as hone in on essential skills that will allow me to continue a career in agricultural marketing and communications. The entire NSR staff made it an exciting summer, and they all helped me push a little bit further to reach my goals.

For more information, contact Katie Maupin, Director of Marketing & Communications, at katie@nationalswine.com.

Charlie Huenelsenbeck, Purdue University

NJSA Intern

During my time at the NSR, I learned a lot about how much work actually goes into coordinating a large event, such as World Pork Expo (WPX) and National Junior Summer Spectacular (NJSS). In addition to the prep-work before leaving the office, there are long hours to look forward to while at the show. A lot of behind the scenes work goes into an event like that, and now, I will definitely not take for granted any of the work others do to put on shows. The best experiences I have from this summer are all the memories with the people I got to know during the time as the NJSA intern: be it the junior board members, employees of NSR or the people I got to work with at the shows. Those will be memories I will take with me and use for the rest of my life.

For more information, contact Kaley Bontrager, Director of Junior Activities, at kaley@nationalswine.com.

Matt Romoser, Iowa State University

Field Staff Intern

My time at the National Swine Registry (NSR) was, without question, one of the most memorable and beneficial experiences in my college career. I was able to serve as a face for the NSR, network with some of the sharpest minds in the purebred industry and learn what it takes to raise elite seedstock. The connections made, both personal and professional, are something I know will continue long after the conclusion of the internship. Additionally, I have acquired an entirely new appreciation of everything that goes into hosting a type conference. This internship only intensified my desire and passion for the swine industry, and I have no doubt it will lead to new opportunities in the future.

For more information, contact Brian Arnold, V.P. of Member Outreach & Youth Development, at arnold@nationalswine.com.

Internship applications due Oct. 1, 2015.

DNA STRESS STATEMENT

» No known stress positive or stress carrier Duroc, Hampshire, Landrace or Yorkshire animals will be allowed to be exhibited or sold at any NSR-sponsored event.

» Such warranty, however, is solely that of the seller and not that of the American Landrace Association (ALA), American Yorkshire Club (AYC), Hampshire Swine Registry (HSR) or the United Duroc Swine Registry (UDSR).

» The ALA, AYC, HSR and UDSR assume no responsibility or liability in connection with such warranty by the seller.

» If any animal sold at this conference is found to be a carrier of the stress gene, the purchaser has the right to receive full refund of the purchase price from the seller.

» DNA testing for the stress gene must be done within 60 days of the sale date and all costs associated with testing for stress must be paid by the purchaser. The seller has the right to review the test results and the right to re-test the animal at a laboratory of his/her choice.

» Cost associated with re-test by the seller is at the seller’s expense. There will be no refund of NSR commission from stress-carrier animals.

BREEDING ANIMAL SALE

» Breeding animals will be divided into classes as equally as possible by farrowing date.

» A minimum of 60 percent of the number of each sex (boars and gilts) shown will be selected for the sale. These animals will be selected with no set number selling from any single class. Animals not selected for the sale can be consigned to the sale for an additional fee of $20 per head; this must be done by the conclusion of the breed show. If the animal sells, the fee will be applied toward the sale commission. If the animal does not sell, the fee is forfeited.

» All animals selected and cataloged for the sale MUST go through the auction. Sale commission will be 15 percent for all animals. If an animal that is selected and cataloged for sale does not go through the sale ring, the exhibitor will be banned from exhibiting at NSR events for one year and will be charged 15 percent of the average selling price of their respective breed sale. This amount must be paid before reinstatement will be allowed. The exception to this rule will be if an animal has become injured or ill and is inspected by a NSR staff member prior to the sale.

» The NSR acts only as the agent between buyer and seller. If proper payment is made by the buyer in a timely manner, the NSR will make settlement with the seller in approximately 30 days after the sale.

SPECIAL BREED REQUIREMENTS

(Hampshire, Landrace & Yorkshire Exhibitors)

» By entering any hog in the Fall Classic, the owner warrants that the hog meets specific breed requirements.

» Such warranty, however, is solely that of the seller and not that of the HSR, ALA and UDSR and the HSR, ALA, AYC and UDSR assumes no responsibility or liability in connection with such warranty by the seller.

» If any Hampshire or Yorkshire animal sold at the Fall Classic is found to be a carrier of the color gene after being tested through the procedures approved by the HSR, ALA and AYC, the seller agrees that he/she will promptly refund the full purchase price to the buyer. There will be no refund of NSR commission from animals that are carriers of the color gene.

WW-Paul Livestock Scales

Hog & Sheep pens

Model 58SX
500-lb. single animal livestock scale

The new and improved WW-Paul Scale Model 58SX includes the new side slide, bi-fold gate design for faster and easier operation. The Model 58SX is easily retrofitted with an electronic cell, readout indicator and ticket or tape printer, if desired. Heavy-duty construction guarantees an accurate and dependable livestock scale.

All hog and sheep components are constructed from A-513 high-tensile steel tubing. Framework is fabricated from 1/16”, 14-gauge tubing, and interior vertical rails are built from 1/8”, 16-gauge tubing. All joints are saddle cut for extra strength. Gate frame is 72” tall and panels are available in 41” or 48” heights. All units have powder coat finish.

CANDY-CAIN
111-2 Head Turner x Oh My
WT 320 lbs. • BF 0.85 • LEA 9.2 • WDA 1.71

I want to start off by thanking one of the premier Hampshire breeders in the country, the Cain family, for giving us the opportunity to own this genetic giant. We are very excited to be able to use this young prospect. Study the picture from the ground up and try to pick this one apart. For starters, CANDY-CAIN has that boar attitude. He has big, even toes, and look at the angles on his feet going up to that massive forearm. He’s king in his ham and level topped. CANDY-CAIN is deep sided and tall at the point of the shoulders. He is also up headed and bold chested. If you are trying to make phenomenal breeding stock or show barrows, don’t look past this guy. This is a boar that needs to used!

S.O.A.
(SON-OF-ANARCHY)

S.O.A. is already assuming his daddy’s role by being well designed and is showing signs of being an aggressive breeder (like father, like son). We are confident that S.O.A. will follow in his father’s footsteps by making boars that are well designed and aggressive and females that will be well designed, easy to handle, cycle regularly, milk like a Jersey cow and breed back. When it comes to being a true breeding piece, S.O.A. is a very fine specimen. S.O.A. is very well balanced, extremely well designed and structurally correct. S.O.A. is big topped and square made with excellent feet and leg design. S.O.A. is very youthful in his appearance and is very flexible.

YIN-YANG

Monumental X Steel Force
WT 375 lbs. • BF 0.81 • LEA 11.4

When looking for boars, we always start at the ground (looking at his feet). Well this one won’t disappoint – he has some excellent running gears. Big, even toes that hit the ground at the right angle, and he is strong in his pasterns which go into heavy-structured legs and forearms. Good extension out through his neck and head. Jet level top, big rump and deep sided. We think this one is going to be an exciting one to use on those purebreds to make show barrows and gilts.

limited amounts of stress and the vaccine is handled properly, we may increase our percentages enough to make a difference. I always tell myself that if I can make one less mummy or stillborn per litter, on average, considering what that showpig may be worth when it comes time to market them, it easily justifies trying to do a better job.

Nutrition
This will be different from farm to farm and group to group as some gilts may have been managed as replacement gilts and can be fed harder at breeding time, while others may have been shown and need to have some weight taken off before breeding.

The heavier-conditioned gilts can lose some weight before breeding; however, they will be harder to get bred if they are actively losing weight at the time of breeding. Ideally, all breeding animals should be maintaining or gaining weight at the time of breeding. The show industry needs to remember this when we are evaluating the “ideal” show gilts. Many gilts I saw show at Indiana State Fair were still too fat. This makes it hard on the breeder getting those gilts to have a litter of pigs they can farrow unassisted and raise to weaning age.

Sows are also important to have in good body condition. Try to avoid having sows too thin coming out of the crate and breeding. In the showpig world, there are also a lot of sows that may only be bred once a year. It is important to prevent these sows from becoming overconditioned between farrowings.

Breeding
There is a nice article in the August Seedstock that several boar studs contributed to regarding breeding time. It is worth your study if you haven’t read it. Here is an additional note regarding questions I receive regarding breeding.

Matrix can be a useful tool. I find it may be the most beneficial in sows that have been standing open for a long period of time and may not be cycling very well. In these cases, I normally recommend they be given a dose of PG600 12-24 hours after the last dose of Matrix.

Cystorelin can also be a useful tool. Cystorelin is one of the GnRH products on the market and is used to induce ovulation. It takes close to 30 hours for any GnRH product to have an effect on the ovary, so I typically recommend giving 2 mL at the time of first breeding and then breeding with a second dose of semen 18-24 hrs later in those sows that have been problem breeders.

Gestation
Pregnancy checking is one of the first things many producers like to do to ensure the breeding status of their herd. Ultrasonography is the most reliable tool for checking pregnancy status in sows. Consult your veterinarian on the availability of this service. A majority of ultrasounds can pick up pregnancies starting around 22-24 days of gestation. The one thing an ultrasound has trouble determining is the number of fetuses. An ultrasound is only a two-dimensional slice of a three-dimensional picture, so it is almost impossible to accurately determine a number of fetuses. However, it is very accurate in determining pregnant or open. There are other methods of pregnancy checking that can be useful but are not as accurate as the ultrasound.

Nutrition, like with any other phase of production, is very important during gestation. A balanced gestation ration at a rate of 4-6 pounds per day should be fed to maintain body condition. Overfeeding and underfeeding during gestation should be avoided; however, in most showpig settings this is difficult to achieve. Many groups are in pens, which results in some dominant sows getting more than their share as well as the opposite occurring. Spreading out the feeding area and making sure there is plenty of space for each sow during feeding is important to try and limit the disparity between how much each sow in the group consumes. A smart veterinarian once told me he’s never done a c-section on a skinny sow or gilt. The reasons that overfed, heavy-conditioned sows and gilts have issues are numerous. Some of those reasons are increased fetal size, decreased room in the pelvis from the extra fat tissue deposited there, decreased stamina during farrowing and decreased milking ability from the fat surrounding the mammary tissue.

Deworming is often indicated during gestation. Safeguard in the feed is a good way to deworm during gestation, and an injectable deworming a couple of days prior to farrowing to control lice and mange is also recommended.

Most producers should also utilize a pre-farrowing vaccine that helps stimulate protection in the new litter for diseases like E. coli, Clostridium, Bordetella and Pasteurella.

Thanks to Bruce Butler for helping us own a true breeding boar for breeders who are serious about raising purebred Yorkshires. This boar will allow you the opportunity to raise Purebred Yorkshire hogs for what purebred Yorkshires were made to do, and that is be great females. This is a Yorkshire boar that can make Yorkshires more productive, which starts with a hip made for sows that will farrow with ease. His pedigree really has some big time Yorks in it like Raw Power 13-4, Slam Dunk and many others too numerous to mention. If you are tired of having unsound, unproductive and inefficient Yorkshires, then it is time for you to use Extant.

Here is a list of breeders that have had an impact on this boar's genetic package. Adam Conover, Brice Conover, Del Guard, Jim Grimm, Olsen Yorkshires, George Watson, Hilman Schroeder, Ricker Yorkshires, Tracy Lorenzen, Thompson Bros., Cedar Ridge, John McCloud and Wayne Huinker.

Extant can make a difference and a big influence to the Yorkshire breed for those who are truly committed to making better Yorkshires.

Pigs available for sale off the farm year round.

We would like to give a special thanks to Travis Platt, Sam Scher, Doc Fischer and the whole crew at Upperhand Genetics for believing in our program and this special boar that has been one amazing specimen since we found him in the nursery. The four weeks prior to state fair, we bred 35 sows to ANY TIME, and the quality and volume of his semen has been excellent. ANY TIME will continue to breed our very best sows here at Wehmer Showpigs, and we can’t wait to see his offspring. We think ANY TIME is the best boar we have ever put together, and that is a pretty bold statement considering the impact Immortal made in the crossbred world.

Time’s Up, the sire of ANY TIME at Upperhand Genetics, will also continue to see heavy use at Wehmer Showpigs. He is really stamping big-boned, stout-skulled pigs that have muscle and that special look with great flexibility. Time’s Up just had six class winners at Kentucky State Fair and Reserve Middleweight Cross.

NEW BOARS, NEW CHAMPIONS

WE ARE CONSTANTLY GROWING OUR BREEDING SELECTION. CHECK OUT OUR NEW BOARS AND CHAMPIONS.

HACO2 TCG UNTOUCHABLE 1-4 X RIY3 RICOCHE
We selected this popular Thomas Crome boar at the STC in Louisville. He is powerful with a great look and an excellent set of feet and legs. With the genetics behind him, he should be a great one to use.

CRE4 RED LIGHT 32-5
We are retaining this outstanding Light Em Up son to put in our boar stud. He is out of a powerful litter and has that great look to go along with tremendous width, a bold rib, and excellent muscle shape. He is very athletic and flexible on the move. His mother is one of our top proven Duroc sows (Beast X Square D).

CLASS WINNING YORKSHIRE GILT
Summer Type Conference in Louisville shown by Kyle Real. Thanks to Tim King of West Virginia for his purchase of this outstanding gilt.

2ND PLACE (behind the Reserve Champion)
NJSA Summer Spectacular in Louisville shown by Campbell Real. Good Luck to Levi and Lea Kimley of Ohio with this great female.

These two gilts are bred much like our Champion York Boar and Reserve Open York Gilt at San Antonio (APRL The Duke [True Grit] X CDO Prestige [Mighty One]).

STRUCK GOLD
(Equalizer x Steel Force’s Littermate)
CROSSBRED DOAR BUY OF THE YEAR!!!
Very stout skulled, big footed boar that has that extra extension and flash every breeder wants to implement into their herd. Struck Gold has a big rib cage and full rump while being opened up through his lower skeleton. But what makes this guy a MUST USE is the fact that with all of his bone and power he’s still tremendous in his skeletal build from the side. Feet and legs are impeccable as he’s strong pasterned and flat/clean jointed…. Strike it RICH with STRUCK GOLD!!!

New

HAIR NATION
(Grand Drive x Stand Out)
HAIR IS BACK in style!! Tremendous Extension and head carriage wrapped up in an extremely sound and pliable package. HAIR NATION is very bold headed and square chested while being massive through the center portion of his rib. But it’s all of his extra skeletal quality and design that makes us feel this guy could truly make an impact on the yorshires breed. So get on board and make Yorkshire better and as Mark Hoge puts it, “Let’s bring HAIR NATION back.”

New

CASH
(Oman X Happy Feet)
This record-setting spotted boar from the 2015 WPX is exactly what we have been looking for. This ultra cool designed, level rascal is as flawless in his hip and hind leg structure as you can make one. We feel he will follow Tango’s string ability and work perfect on the most popular spotted genetic lines available today. When on the move, you realize this guy is something special. Tango and Cash are two outstanding spotted boar options!

TRUE BLUE
(Marshall Monster x Money Shot x Toxic)
A truly impressive mature boar!! True Blue is a MUST USE if your trying to help the maturity pattern of your sows. This guy is extremely proportionate and great designed from the profile. He’s opened up and plants and pushes off of a perfect hip and hind leg. Visitors marvel over his soundness while being great pasterned and monster footed.

New

FLAME THROWER
(Striking Match x Killer Instinct x Suzanne)
What a creature!! When we saw Flame Thrower we knew this one COULD change the Make world in one generation. Its no secret we need to make hogs longer and more extended sacrificing any width or power and Flame Thrower will defiantly fit the bill!! This dude is extra tall bodied with a big back and lots of shape and mass but what makes him even more unique is the fact that he can motor for days while being strong pasterned and good footed. Furthermore, on paper he’s as power packed as any, with a pedigree tracing back to the great Suzanne (Monuntails Mother). So if you’re ready to light em up, you better get aboard the flame with Flame Thrower!!
TRIGGER
(Colt 45 x Stick This)
This is the one! Visitors marvel about Trigger’s ability to combine stoutness and power with skeletal organization. His generating power is being proven by his successes just like OYE - siring the Reserve ham (3rd Overall, Bronze Medal Winner) and siring the most gilts of any sire that sold in the OYE gilt sale.
In addition his pigs have won shows all across the country.

By AgCareers.com

AgCareers.com, the leading supplier of human resource services to the agriculture and food industry, has partnered with the Seedstock EDGE to bring you valuable tips to help with your career search, as well as the latest job listings in our industry.

Career PROFILE

By AgCareers.com

Developing work ethic: learn skills through minimum wage, part-time and entry level positions

Human resource professionals in the agricultural industry say the most valuable skill set for new employees is work ethic. Work ethic can be described as many things, but often encompasses hard work, reliability, professionalism, diligence, positivity, commitment and respect.

“All experiences are learning opportunities, whether they be minimum wage jobs, volunteering or internships,” says Sheila Waldrop, Sr. Recruitment Specialist, BASF – The Chemical Company.

Companies want to know you have potential to learn and grow and are looking for transferable skills such as communication, collaboration, focus and innovation.

Waldrop adds, “These are skills everyone should have, no matter what level. For example, you could explain how you worked well as part of a team, whether it be at McDonald’s or on a farm.”

Muddy mornings detasseling corn, cleaning out a hog barn or working on the family farm demonstrates hard work and teaches you the inner workings of some agricultural operations. Balancing those overnight shifts – stocking shelves at the grocery store while taking a full class load – teaches you time management, perseverance and dedication.

“Just about every job has some aspect of customer focus, even if the customer isn’t external. A customer could be someone in another department or anyone who relied on you to accomplish something for them,” Waldrop says.

Taking a job as a retail clerk will help you develop sales and customer service skills, while being a server hones your ability to work with difficult customers.

Commitment to any entry-level job shows your reliability and diligence. Being punctual is an expected trait of employees at all levels. A small pay check forces you to stick to a budget. You learn cost-saving measures and money management skills.

All job experiences help you learn your likes and dislikes in the work world and guide you in determining your career path.

Starting Full-Time

When you enter your full-time career, organizations really don’t want to take the time to teach basic tasks that can so often be learned through part-time work, such as processing a credit card payment or sending a fax.

Your part-time work can teach you basic office or field skills to make the transition to a full-time career easier.

Internships and related work experiences are important in securing full-time employment. The largest percentage of ag companies say their new graduate hires have previous internship or work experience. We still can’t underestimate the power of internships and jobs in your chosen career field; however, all work experience helps you develop needed skills and growth in your career.

Kim Brock

In 2014, Kim Brock saw a stand-out, Monster Pipe (Moyer’s Genetic Edge), belted crossbred barrow in Jackson, Mississippi, bred by Tucker Farms and Paula Chisholm.

“He was so impressive, I had the thought -‘I wish we could stop time and have all judges, breeders and critics from across the nation come and see this barrow.’”

“This belted market hog was the closest to perfect that I have seen, even though one picture doesn’t show all,” Brock says. “He was ideal in his structural design, and from the side view, he was impressive in every way. This barrow was blessed with the structural looseness and effortless mobility that most market hogs need for the show ring and to assure safe arrival to harvest. He had the natural fill, degree of condition and loin edge expression that, combined with perfect skin and hair, spelled a degree of freshness and youthfulness that can only be displayed by a fast-growing, performance hog. His muscle was perfectly long designed, full and certainly not extreme. His wide, square, big, soft, properly-finished, expressive top and box-shaped rib with good center curvature, combined with feet and leg squareness as he approached you exemplified ideal width of structure and center body that fit his skeleton in a non-extreme but very balanced way.”
